ABOUT ME

I have spent over eight years in sales — covering territories across Eastern Ethiopia and Addis Ababa, sitting across from buyers in Dire Dawa, Jigjiga, and the capital, and learning that every market has its own pace, its own trust signals, and its own way of doing business. That variety shaped how I approach sales: not as a formula to repeat, but as a problem to read fresh in each context.

Today I manage 150+ B2B accounts at Romel General Trading in Addis Ababa, and before that I led marketing for OL-BRIGHT College as it grew from one branch to two — with a third in the pipeline. At Deran PLC, I did not inherit a sales department — I built one from zero, then grew revenue by 20% in two years. My MBA and BSc in Agribusiness give me the frameworks; the years across different markets give me the instincts.

What I bring to any role: territory ownership, distributor trust, team coaching, and an honest eye on the market. I speak four languages, which in this region is not a footnote — it opens doors that stay closed for others.
